Terry Veile is in his first year as assistant volleyball coach for Culver-Stockton College in Canton Missouri. Working with both the men's and women's programs, Coach Veile serves as the recruiting coordinator, strength and conditioning director, DOVO, statistical analyst, and scouting analyst. Joining the volleyball family of Culver-Stockton College has provided an opportunity for Coach Veile to work alongside three time Olympian and International Hall of Fame inductee Caren Kemner. Before his move back to the midwest in the fall 2018, Coach Veile spent the 2017-18 season as an assistant coach and summer camp coordinator for the Community Colleges of Spokane. In addition to his responsibilities as assistant coach with the Spokane Sasquatch team, Coach Veile helped supervise registration and developed teaching drills for individual camp. He also coordinated team camp which included 27 different teams at 2 different locations.

Coach Veile is an Evergreen Region (ERVA) High Performance Coach. During his first year with the regional team, he joined Jennifer Greeny (Washington State University Head Coach) and Giedre Tarnauskaite (University of Montana Assistant Coach) to represent the region. He has coached numerous traveling club teams in both USAV Evergreen and Gateway regions, and is certified as a USA patched official for the region. On top of coaching, Coach Veile is a personal trainer where he specializes in weight loss, injury prevention, and resistance programs including cardiovascular fitness.

Coach Veile's playing career started with him going to high school practices with his dad when he was little. He went to Quincy University (IL) to play NCAA Division I Men's Volleyball in the MIVA Conference. Some of his awards during his time at QU include All-Conference Academic as well as the prestigious St. Francis Award. In addition to being a student-athlete, he also spent over 120 hours teaching in educational classrooms and tutoring.

Coach Veile graduated in 2015 from Quincy University with his Bachelors of Science with a concentration in Mathematics.
